LEHMAN BROTHERS

Lehman Brothers is an innovator in global finance, serves the financial needs of corporations, governments and municipalities, institutional clients, and high net worth individuals worldwide. Founded in 1850, Lehman Brothers maintains leadership positions in equity and fixed income sales, trading and research, investment banking, private investment management, asset management and private equity.

Lehman Brothers networks are committed to promoting our "One Firm" culture and to creating an inclusive environment for all employees. They support the Firm's businesses by partnering with recruiting, providing mentorship opportunities, exchanging ideas and information and educating managers on issues of interest to their members. Lehman Brothers Multicultural Network (LBMCN) was established in 2006 to provide a supportive environment for the Firm's black and ethnic minority employees to enhance career development and retention. LBMCN sponsors monitoring programmes and networking events within the Firm and also reaches out to the community through philanthropic activities.

The Lehman Brothers Multicultural Network is hosting this event in conjunction with the Oxford University Diversity Societies.

Oxford Afro-Caribbean Society (xACS)

xACS is a society which aims to bring together students in Oxford University by providing a sociable environment in which they can get to know each other and other students who share their interest in contemporary black culture, black history and commemorating their African and/or Caribbean roots. The true aim of the society is to bring people together, irrelevant of race, background and belief, to help promote self-empowerment. The society is about sharing experiences, positively exploring our differences and understanding the many cultures that makeup our societies. When it comes down to it, as people, we have more in common than we have in difference, and the xACS helps to promote that.

Oxford University Africa Society is the Oxford (AfriSoc)

Its affiliates and worldwide network span across four continents and thousands of interested parties. The society aims to further an understanding of current issues related to the Asia-Pacific as well as an interest in the political, economic, social and cultural developments in this dynamic region of the world. The society envisages to present an all-encompassing society which is focused on the Asia-Pacific but in an international context and a global outlook.

Oxford University Hong Kong Society

Set up in 1978, this is your home away from home. We aim to make Oxford an easier place to live in by providing help in the initial stage, promoting friendship among our members, and furthermore bear our responsibility as 'ambassadors' of Hong Kong to promote our culture. Through our activities I certainly hope you will find yourself a circle of friends in no time which is essential to making University life more bearable, or even fun!

Oxford Chinese International Awareness (OXCIA)

It is a vibrant, inclusive society that aims to promote an interest in Chinese culture within Oxford University. Anyone with any interest in Chinese culture is encouraged to come to our events, and we're here to foster this interest, give advice and answer questions. We regularly organize speaker events, museum visits and free mandarin lessons as education is an integral part of promoting cultural awareness. In addition, we also hold orient-themed parties, food-related events, film nights, festival celebrations, and trips to China.

Oxford University Malaysia Club (OUMC)

The OUMC gives Malaysians a chance to get together for any occasion, be it to celebrate a festival in our own inimitable style with culinary delights, or to represent the club at the annual Nottingham Games (which rings together Malaysia Clubs from all over the UK for a sporty reason), or to listen to a speaker the Club brought in. The Club is not limited to a Malaysian only - one of our aims is to spread awareness of Malaysian culture among students at Oxford. The annual Malaysian Night is usually a grand black tie affair which pulls in about 200 students, most of which are non-Malaysian Oxonians.

Oxford Indian Society

Oxford Indian Society aims to celebrate India and its diversity. We host seminars, debates and talks both on Indian heritage and on issues relevant to contemporary India. We also hold a range of social and cultural events. Finally, we act as a forum to promote events organised by other societies which may be of interest to our members. We hope that these events can help to increase understanding between different cultures, cutting across barriers based on sects, religion and nationalities.

Young Jains Students Oxford

Young Jains Students Oxford is an organisation that encourages the discussion and exploration of Jain philosophy, spirituality and its practical importance to life, in an open and friendly environment. Jainism is an ancient Indian religion based around the principles of non-violence, harmlessness and reincarnation.

Sikh Society

Sikhism preaches a message of devotion and remembrance of God at all times, truthful living, equality of mankind and denounces superstitions and blind rituals. Sikhism is open to all through the teachings of its 10 Gurus, which are embodied within the eternal guide of the Sikhs and Living Guru, Sri Guru, Granth Sahib Ji.

Oxford University Hindu Society (HUM)

HUM aims to cater for the needs of the Hindu, and by extension Indian, population in Oxford by providing religious, social, and cultural events appropriate to the traditions and customs of Hindu life. Our standing aim is to ensure that all events are of the highest quality, and tailored to the needs of our members. HUM also aims to educate Hindus and non-Hindus alike in the main teachings and philosophy of Hinduism. HUM does not affiliate itself, nor promote the agenda of any political party.

Oxford University Chinese Association (OUCNA)

OUCNA is a young, growing society which aims to cater for the needs of students from the Chinese community studying at Oxford University.
